This Week in Wabash

Hello, Wabash,

Happy Monday. I hope you're having a great start to your week. This is always a strange week time-wise. We're right in between two major holidays, so the clock seems to move in strange ways when the normal routines of life are temporarily thrown aside. Anyway, I hope you had a great Christmas and I hope you have a happy New Year's planned, as well.

This week, I wanted to let you know what I'll be working on for Friday's newspaper and ask for your assistance.

I am in the process of writing the Plain Dealer's Year in Review article. This is not just a collection of the most-read stories on our website. This is more about what was most important in the community, whether or not it received the greatest number of clicks. Now, granted, popularity has to be considered because if many people read a particular story that has to be given some extra weight. (Obviously, people were taking it in and talking about it with one another.) But, this is not exactly what we're after here.

Here's the part where you come in: I want to know what you thought were the top stories of the year. I'll have my own ideas, of course, but I want to hear from our readers as well. This isn't just about individual stories, either. This is about subjects and themes, too. What had the importance in your own life? Which stories did you share with your friends, family and neighbors? If you have any ideas you'd like to share with me, please email me back no later than 5 p.m. today. I'd be very glad to hear what you have to say.

Well, that's all I have for you this week. Remember to stay safe this holiday season.

Best,
Rob
